The Atlantic Telegraph Cable.

Our contemporaries of the press are not disposed to regard the break in the Atlantic telegraph cable in a despondent spirit. On the contrary, the impression is universal that the late experiment, unfortunate as it proved, demonstrated the entire feasibility of the project. and that the attempt will be made again and again until complete success crowns the efforts of the bold, enterprising, and resolute men who have the great work in charge.

The New York Evening Post says: "This accident, which defers for at least another year electrical communication between the eastern and western hemispheres, was evidently not of a fatal character. There was no inexorable necessity for a properly-proportioned telegraph cable to break from its weight in the water, that being practically the measure of tension to which this one was necessarily subjected. Had the steamer sailed a little slower, or had the cable been permitted to run freely, it would not have broken. It may have been too short; sufficient allowance may not have been made in measuring the cable for driftage, tidal currents, storms, &c., which must be indulged, and the superintendent might have deemed it prudent to apply the brake, so as to straighten the cable, more, as the event proved, than it could bear, and so it broke. But that is an accident which has happened to every boy who has ever flown a kite; but we doubt if the liability of kite-strings to break, if injudiciously handled, ever discouraged a single boy from kite-flying. Neither ought nor will the accident which has happened to this cable, if we are correctly advised of the character and extent of it, in the mous than the founders of cities or the conquerors of em-

The Journal of Commerce says: "The failure of the Atlantic telegraph expedition, by reason of a rupture of the wire some 350 miles from the starting point on the coast of Ireland, is no more than it was reasonable to expect, although hopes were entertained of a more auspicious result. After meeting with this diaster the expedition returned to the coast of Ireland, either to commence the work anew with the 2,000 miles of wire unexpended, or to postpone the whole matter until next year, as should be counselled by the savans in ing. council assembled. We apprehend that the latter alternative will be adopted. The season is so far advanced that heavy weather would almost of necessity be encountered before the whole process could be completed; and Copper Facing all type manufactured by us-if desired. a gale of wind, such as is often experienced in September in the region of Newfoundland, is sufficiently formidable even to a vessel which has the use of her limbs. To one attached to a wire 1.500 or 2.000 miles long, which can neither be strained nor abandoned without serious damage, such gales would be necessarily disastrous, and should not be encountered without the most urgent necessity. On the whole, we consider the experiment a complished in 1858, or in some subsequent year, is more than probable; though we cannot shut our eyes to the Atlantic telegraph project, and we trust it will not .-But it is very possible that many more unsuccessful experiments will have to be made before the exact structure, size, &c., of the wire, the machinery for laying it, the attending circumstances, will all be so favorable as

The Baltimore American has the following remarks: "The great difficulty in depositing the cable, it is evident, arises from the application of the brakes. Nor is this a difficulty to excite surprise. When the great momentum of a ship like the Niagara is considered it is evident that, even at the lowest rate of progress, the strain thrown upon the cable when the brakes checked its progress must have been sufficient to part it with as much ease and as suddenly as one breaks a thread.— Letters from on board the Niagara, received by the pre-Vious steamer, stated that in coming round from Cork to Valencia bay experiments had beed tried with a piece Lenoir Institute, Lenoir County, N. C., or to of the cable about ten miles in length, by dropping the end into the sea with a kedge-anchor attached. The paying out on these occasions worked admirably, yet at three successive trials the cable broke like a pipe-stem when the brakes were applied and the paying out stopped, though the ship was going at the rate of only two miles per hour. Increasing the size and strength of the cable would not overcome the difficulty, for this increase would necessitate additional weight, giving the cable a tendency to run out more rapidly and rendering necessary resort to sudden and powerful checks that would snap it apart just as easily as one of lesser strength. The only adequate provision that would entirely obviate this difficulty will probably be found in stopping the vessel before the brakes are applied, "underrunning" any portion that may be kinked or have payed out too rapidy, and starting anew after the defect had been corrected. This might prolong the process, but it would prevent under no circumstances will the cable be found able to withstand the strain that must ensue from applying the brakes before the headway of the vessel is checked.

"The temporary delay which this accident has interposed to the accomplishment of a magnificent project, though a matter of regret, will not be permitted to encourage despondency as to the final success of the enterprise. In so immense a task, commenced and carried out without the experience that could be gathered from the existence of any similar work, the full success of the first trial, though it might be hoped for, could not be fairly expected. The submarine telegraph cables heretofore haid have merely extended across narrow straits or arms of the sea, and have found their resting places at distanees under water that are insignificant compared with the depths to which the Atlantic cable was sunk. In attempting the latter work there were hazards to be encountered and difficulties to be learned and mastered, that it was scarcely possible could be so fully foreseen or so successfully met as to make the first effort anything more than a practical experiment.

"The pecuniary resources of the company are so enlarged as to enable them to encounter this disaster without serious damage. In addition to the liberal aid and guarantees afforded by the governments of the United States and Great Britain, the private subscriptions have been large. Up to the 30th June, (at which time the balance sheet had been made up.) £243,493 of the capital had been paid up; out of this £190,330 had been expended, and a balance of £167,000 remained to the between June 30, when the accounts were balanced, and August 7, when the cable was actually laid at Valencia. August 7, when the cable was actually laid at Valencia. cash, and hope by prompt attention to business, to merit These would be considerable, but there must be yet a fair share of public patronage. available at least £100,000 to pay for the further prosecution of the undertaking.'

The polishing of plate glass has hitherto been a work of much labor and tediousness, and the finest plates have been produced only at a great expense in the largest manufactories of Europe, where the work of polishing has been entirely done by hand. American inventors have, however, succeeded in perfecting machinery by which glass may be polished with much more expedition than by hand, with considerable more uniformity of eauty and surface, and at so great a reduction in cost. that plate glass may now almost supersede the ordinary article, and any man of moderate means may possess half a dozen pier mirrors in his house.

Rough Rice, & bushel,.....

TURPENTINE-The-market for this article has ruled steady at last week's quotations, and about all received has been taken for distilling purposes; the demand from shippers is mited, as they do not appear disposed to operate to any extent unless at a reduction in prices. The receipts have been light, and owing to the low stage of the water courses in from above tide-way, with the exception of small lots per offering shipment. See table for rates. railroad. The operations for the week just ended are as

CORN MEAL. The stock on market is fully fair, with a noderale demand from retailers, and prices remain without change. Selling in the small way at $1 15 $ bushel. EMPTY BARBELS .- In the market for Spirits Turpentine barrels we have no change to make worthy of note. There has been a moderate enquiry existing, and with limited receipts for a few weeks the stock in first hands has become very light. We quote small sales since our last at $1 80 a quiet. Lard is quiet at 11c. $1 90 for ordinary quality, and $1 95 a $2 for selected second tations. FLOUR .- For State brands the market has ruled exceedingly dull during the week, buyers showing no disposition whatever to operate unless at a considerably reduced figure, at 78s. Linseed oil has declined-sales at 38s. which holders are unwilling to accede to. The arrivals per the stock in first hands is accumulating. During the early and 91 for account. part of the week a few small lots changed hands at $6 871 a $7 for superfine, and $7 25 a $7 50 for family; it is now freey offered at above figures, without finding a buyer. In the absence of sales we quote nominally at $6 a $6 25 for cross, $6 25 a $6 50 for fine, $6 75 a $7 for superfine, and $7 25 a $7 50 for family. No Northern brands on market and no

GRAIN .- In CORN we have no change of importance to make on previous rates. A large portion of the receipts for two or three weeks past has been of inferior quality, (some of it slightly damaged,) which, together with the decline in other markets, has imparted a dull feeling to the market here. Dealers also have a supply on hand fully sufficient for their uses, and in anticipation of a reduction in price, do not appear much disposed to operate. The receipts for the week reach only about 10,320 bushels of which 1,400 do. went at 824 cents, 1,560 do. at 88 cents, and 800 do. on private terms, believed at 90 cents per bushel, as that figure is known to have been offered :- the balance came to dealers, and has gone into store, and is selling in the small way at 95 cents a $1 $\text{\text{$\pi}}$ bushel, as in quantity and quality.\text{\text{$\pi$-OATS-We} Rice is quiet.} have nothing new to notice in this article; supply on market fully fair. No receipts; last sale was at 42 cents for new .- PEAS-Remain about as last reported. There is only a small stock of old crop Cow on market, and there seems to be very little demand. One or two small lots have changed hands at $1 10 a $1 15 per bushel, as in quality. -RICE-The stock of clean on market is rather light, and we note a moderate demand from the trade. Sales in the small way from store at 5 a 5½ cents ₩ lb., as in quality. quiet, and with unfavorable advices received, rates here are a shade lower. We quote sales of only about 8,200 bushels at $1 30 a $1 33 for red, and $1 42 a $1 43 for white-closing dull at lowest figures, and buyers demanding a further concession in prices.

HAY-Nothing of consequence to report in this article .-There is a full stock in dealers hands, and with merely a retail demand existing the market rules exceedingly dull. A lot of 259 bales Northern make received on Wednesday and sold at 60 cents $\mathre{A}$ 100 lbs., 90 days. See table for quotations

LIME.—The market continues to rule quite dull, and we ote a fair stock in dealers hands. We reduce store rates a shade, and quote at $1 25 a $1 30 $2 cask, in lots to suit. LUMBER-River-No late receipts or sales, in the absence of which our quotations are merely nominal. See table for prices of steam sawed. LIQUORS-The market is very well supplied with domestic, and rates are a shade lower. See table. Molasses-At present we note a good stock of most descriptions on market, with very little demand existing .-Only small sales have taken place from store and wharf dur ing the week at prices ranging within quoted rates, as in uality. See table. POTATOES .- Irish are in demand, and very few on market; sell from carts at $1 25 to $1 50 $ bushel. Some few parcels of new crop sweet have been brought in, and are selling at $1 40 a $1 50 % bushel.

PROVISIONS .- For N. C. cured Bacon, the market remains without change. The receipts continue meagre, and the quantity in first hands is very light; there is, however, but a limited demand, and transactions for the week have been confined principally to small lots from store. We quote sales at 17 cents for sides and shoulders, 164 a 17 cents for hog ound, and 18 a 181 cents # 15. for hams, according to quantity and quality. The stock of Western cured is also light, but in the absence of the activity noticed in our last, prices have receded a shade. We quote sales from store at 14 a 144 cents for shoulders, and 16 a 164 cents for sides, as in quality; and dry salted at 15 a 151 cents # Tb. for sides. -LARD. The market rules exceedingly firm for both N. C. and Western make, and is very poorly supplied. In demand at 17½ a 18 cents for the former, and 17 cents ₩ 1b. for latter quality .-- POEK-Is without change in price The supply of Northern is light, and we notice a moderate demand. We refer to our table for store rates, according to quantity and quality. Salt .- None of either description received since our las review. There is a large stock of former arrivals Liverpoo ground now in first hands, and as there is a limited demand the market rules decidedly dull. We quote cargo price nominal at 85 cents, and from store at $1 a $1 05 per sack, in quantities to suit. Alum is also in good supply, and sell n the small way at 30 a 40 cents $\ \text{bushel, as in quantity.} Sugar-Is in moderate stock, and prices have gone down

Shingles .- None worthy of note have been brought t market, and there is very little demand. Our quotations in table represent last sales.

TIMBER .- Owing mainly to the low stage of the water ourses, the receipts for a few weeks past have been exceedingly small. Millers have a light stock on hand, and we notice a fair enquiry from them at present. Sales for the week of only 5 a 6 rafts at prices ranging within quotations.

FREIGHTS .- Coastwise rates have ruled inactive during the past week; the large number of vessels in port, and the small quantity of country produce arriving in consequence of the low stage of the water courses, has tended to reduce the arrivals must continue meagre, as little or none is brought | prices, which are a shade lower; very little barrel freights
